Bold Break for More Business.

You know what September was the hottest in thirty-five years. You know what October is so far-no better. To be perfectly frank-in those departments which are most enougy associated with the temperature, namely-Men's Clothing, Boys' Clothing, Ladies' Suits, Jackets. Etc., and Underwearthe volume of business is not what it should be. The stocks were gathered and prepared for normal weather-but the weather has failed to materialize.

It's pride with every wide-awake business to exceed previous records-and we've waited for natural conditions to right themselves until patience has ceased to be a virtue. Now we must resort to heroic methods. One thing is certain-cold weather must come, and your needs for then are clearly defined now. We are determined to force the selling along these lagging lines—naming temptingly low prices as special inducements. We'd rather lose profits than permit the volume of business to diminish. We'd rather sell at a sacrifice now than chance indefinite delay incident to the coming of seasonable autumn weather. It's with that end in view-for the accomplishment of that thoroughly legitimate and laudable purpose-that we inaugurate this great sale this morning.

Appealing Prices in Ladies' Suits, Coats, Skirts, and Waists.

With the positive knowledge that we had gathered the finest stock of Ladies' readyto-wear garments that ever left the tailors' hands-it hits our ambition a disappointing blow to encounter such a stretch of weather as we've had-when everything promised the greatest season's business we have ever had. But these are conditions over which we had no control-and we must force the selling.
